Program Overview
The Master of Business for Veterans (MBV) program is a fully accredited degree offered by the USC Marshall School of Business. MBV is a one-year specialized program established in 2013 specifically designed to assist military veterans in seeking new careers in the field of business and entrepreneurship. MBV engages students in comprehensive introduction of business ideals to support their existing leadership and management skills gained through their military service.

An MBV graduate can achieve the following learning objectives upon completion of the program. Graduates will:

- have understanding of business fundamentals and skill sets needed to successfully transition to a new field in business
- increase understanding of business management
- learn effective ways to grow and sustain organizations
- understand leadership, financial, marketing, and operational strategies
