Figuring Out Social Capital Is Critical for the Future of Hybrid Work

organizations in onboarding new teams remotely. Examples from this past year about effective remote work and focus in-person work solutions in the Marshall School of Business at the University of Southern California. Leaders need to think about the benefits weak ties have for the social capital of the network of the organization. The norm.

The observation, apprenticeship, and face-to-face interaction may no longer be a crucial part of their organizational career development: making it harder for people to maintain the same high level of productivity.

Another important aspect of team onboarding, getting to know one’s colleagues, is not as easy in remote settings.
