Intersectionality is a framework that helps us understand personal identities and social categorizations such as race, class, gender, and how their overlap can bring richer dimensions of diversity. The idea takes on new nuance when applied to military populations.

Join us for an insightful commUNITY conversation on “Intersectionality in the Military” with alumni and students of the USC Marshall School who proudly represent service in our United States Military. Four distinguished Marshall Trojans will share how the various aspects of who they are, and what they stand for, played a role in their military service and their success at USC.
